

Botanical Wizards May Aid Irrigation Project

BELIEF is expressed that the near future will see the establishment of a government experiment station to find and develop plants and crops adapted to peculiar conditions of the Elephant Butte project. Officials at El Paso offices of the reclamation service say the work may begin soon.

The matter was discussed by A. C. Cooley, in charge of the location of experiment stations on irrigation projects, when a routine visit brought him through El Paso several weeks ago. Further investigations will be had with Mr. Cooley by officials who are to visit El Paso again, with hopes that steps can be taken leading to an early establishment of a station.

Such a station, reclamation service officials believe, would be of extreme value to farmers of the Elephant Butte project, possibly duplicating what has been done on the Salt River project in Arizona.

Establishment of an experiment station would involve the procuring of ample acreage for its purpose and the procuring of laborers suitable for necessary investigations. Its purposes would be to improve land already extensively planted, and to discover where on which crops might be raised with profit.

In the opinion of reclamation service officials, establishment of a station here would be followed by efforts to develop a cotton plant better than that planted now. It is a cotton plant producing longer fibers could be adapted to the Elephant Butte project, the annual crop value to the area would materially increase.

Possibilities of such development, officials say, are indicated by results obtained in the Salt River project. Directly through governmental experiments, a long fiber cotton was developed, and found especially adapted to lands there, producing a crop whose return per pound is said by officials to be more than double that of the cotton raised on lands of the Elephant Butte project. The short growing season makes the type of cotton raised in Arizona impossible as a crop for this valley, officials say.

Reclamation service officials are of the opinion that experiments might result in the evolution of a plant whose growing season will be short enough to permit its adaptation to the Elephant Butte project.

The same conditions apply to most of the other crops raised on this project. Practically all hold the possibility of being bettered with assistance expressed by officials that investigations and experiments would so result.

Conferences to be held with Mr. Cooley will lead to active efforts to secure such a station, reclamation officials say.

The Young Lady Across The Way

HOROSCOPE

SUNDAY, OCTOBER 17, 1920.

CONFLICTING forces will be strongly apparent, according to astrology. While the sun, Mercury and Uranus are in benefic aspect, Neptune, Mars and Jupiter are in evil phase.

The planetary rule is still conducive to muddled views on all public questions, but there is a sign read as "interesting great gains on the part of a political leader."

The sun promises benefits to all who are in high positions or ambitious to obtain them. Under this rule it should be less difficult to gain approval or to command loyalty than it has been in the past.

Messages are well directed by the stars today and writings are supposed to be more potent in influencing the human mind while Mercury is in friendly place.

Women who seek political office should make the best of the opportunity this day offers. The stars declare that success awaits certain women of the east who have asked the suffrage of the people.

Love affairs should prosper during this planetary sway, for Uranus is friendly, giving power to men and women, thus favoring persons not endowed with beauty even more than the fortunate possessors of physical charms.

The fact that there were two conjunctions of the planets Jupiter and Saturn, this day is said to account for the spread of discontent and even for the growth of anarchistic plots. Labor will suffer from these sinister planetary influences, which are supposed to cause misunderstanding with employers and to encourage actual physical violence.

Trade may be affected by some untoward conditions at this time and there is likely to be agitation concerning financial questions.

There is an aspect menacing to the security of women in public work, since Neptune and Uranus may be encouraged by the stars.

Persons whose birthdate it is have the augury of success through business capacity this year. Those who are employed probably will be promoted. Children born on this day are likely to be quicktempered, sensitive and restless, but they will have in them the elements of success.
